Published in American Sexuality Magazine (July 7, 2004)

In Bisexual Women in the Twenty-First Century (2003), editor Dawn Atkins offers readers a collection of some of the finest research coming out of the bisexual academic community in the last few years. In each chapter, contributing authors focus on a different element of the experiences of bi women. Part of the book's power and appeal comes from the fact that most of the researchers are bi women themselves, representing viewpoints from diverse members of bi communities. This is a key feature of the book: analysis of the bi women's community is being conducted by its own members. ...
